SUMMARY

A munitions storage area is located on the northern edge of Kansk, 2 kilometers (km) north of the Kan River (Figure 1). The installation is served by a one km spur of the East Siberian railroad system and streets of the urban complex. Numerous secondary roads link the installation internally. The storage site is secured by a single fence and surrounded by a perimeter firebreak. The entire area is wooded, with clearings for each storage building.

The installation (Figures 2 and 3) encompasses 1,100 acres and contains a total of 109 buildings. It consists of six administrative buildings/barracks, 42 munitions storage buildings, 32 general storage buildings, and 29 support buildings. The lack of good quality photography precludes an evaluation of any apparent changes within the installation. Coverage in [] indicates the presence of moderate winter activity.
